9. TECHNICAL REQUIREMENTS

AZTI is an expert in the execution of large-scale projects on biodegradable FADs together with the tropical tuna freezer purse seine fishing sector, and in the replacement of existing synthetic material with biodegradable ones in traditional FAD designs. The tests carried out by AZTI have been carried out mainly in the operational area of the offshore fishing sector to study the functionality of biodegradable materials and the FAD. AZTI does not have an operations centre in tropical latitudes to carry out studies under controlled conditions of degradation of biodegradable materials in tropical marine environments. Therefore, the IM-23-BIZUN project will require the subcontracting of a specialised external service with the necessary facilities for the evaluation of the degradation of biodegradable materials for the construction of FADs under controlled conditions in a tropical marine environment. This service will include the following tasks to be performed by the subcontracted party:

- Elaboration of the experimental design and logistical support for the implementation of the experiment in a controlled tropical marine environment.

- Periodic evaluations of the physical characteristics of the biodegradable materials to be collected and evaluated by technicians from the contracted centre.

Evidence of the experience and technical capacity of the technical service provider in R&D projects related to the evaluation of biodegradable materials in the construction of FADs will be valued.
